MAINE ECHOES

GREAT REJOICING IN NEW YORK OVER THE RESULT.

Chairman Barnum Declines a Congressional Nomination.

Distinguished Gentlemen Talk About the Great Victory.

By American Union Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

New York, Sept. 15.—The Democrats are rejoicing loudly over the Maine victory. One hundred guns were fired in the City Hall Park, at sunset by the grand squad of the general committees of the county. The National Democratic headquarters are crowded, while the Republican headquarters are deserted. Republican dispatches received at 10 p. m. concede a majority of 2,000 to Plaisied, Democratic candidate for Governor. The National executive committee are now in session, perfecting plans for pushing the canvass and improving the favorable situation. The committee members present are Barnum, of Connecticut; Scott, of Pennsylvania; Armstrong, of Ohio; O'Connor, of Tennessee; Smalley, of Vermont; Cooper, of New York; substitute for Hewitt, and Lamar, a substitute for Barnes, of Georgia.

Reports from the interior of Maine come in slowly.

There is nothing to change the conclusion that Plaisied's majority exceeds 3,000. The Republicans are claiming the election of Reed to Congress from the Portland district by 93 majority, but there are no official figures. Babcock and Anderson, Democrats, are probably elected. Senator Barnum has declined the nomination to Congress in the Fourth Congressional district on the ground that his entire time and attention must be devoted to his duties as Chairman of the National Democratic Committee. The following are among the expressions of views of prominent Democrats this evening:

Senator McDonald, of Indiana, said in reply to an inquiry about the Indiana canvass, and the probable effect of the Maine election upon it: "The canvass in Indiana is proceeding satisfactorily. I have never doubted our ability to carry the State, and am now more firmly convinced of it than ever before. The great disaster which has befallen the Republican party in Maine is a crushing blow, from which it will not recover from its effects. It will add thousands to our majority."

W. W. Armstrong, Democratic National Committeeman from Ohio, who came to New York last night for the purpose of attending the meeting of the National Executive Committee, said: "We are endeavoring to do our full duty in Ohio and will be greatly assisted by the glorious result in Maine."

Ex-Senator W. H. Barnum, Chairman of the National Committee, said: "We are naturally delighted with the Maine victory which has so largely surpassed the expectations of most of our friends. We will push the canvass all the more actively now. Some time ago it was reported that the Democrats had abandoned the contest. This was not true. Our advisers from Maine have been uniformly hopeful during the last two weeks. We have never doubted that the Democrats of that State would nearly if not quite efface the large Republican majority of '76."

Mr. W. L. Scott, of the National Committee, added: "I have believed for sometime that the Republicans would lose Maine and told my opinion to many friends several days before the election, among others to Hon. Levi P. Morton. I knew that but few Democrats believed it possible to overcome the Republican majority of four years ago, but what I have heard of the enthusiasm of the Democratic voters there confirmed me in my belief. To have cut down that majority would have been measurably satisfactory to many of our friends. That we have carried the State is a glorious result, for which we are indebted to the popularity of our National candidates and the increasing unpopularity of the Republican party. The odds against us were very great."

Cooper, who acts as the New York member of the National committee in the absence of Hon. Abraham S. Hewitt, said:

"The Maine election is a most important event in the National canvass. State issues were subordinated into National ones. The Republicans' loss since 1876 when the party carried the State by about 15,000 majority, shows that the current of popular sentiment is in favor of Hancock and English and against the contrivance of a Republican administration. This result in the first State which has been seriously contested on National issues is of great significance, and will give to the Democratic canvass in other States that spirit and energy which comes from the prospect of success."

Hon. Thomas O'Connor, member of the National Committee from Tennessee, said: "The victory in Maine indicates the drift of public sentiment in the Union. Maine is a foreshadowing of what is coming in the October States. The Democracy of Indiana and Ohio will be greatly strengthened by the relapse of Blaine in his own State. Tennessee will give Hancock a very large majority. Gen. Kilby Smith said that he had just returned from Colorado and had not a doubt that Hancock would carry that State. Gen. Smith added: 'I went and returned in company with ex-Lieutenant-Governor Dorseimer. We addressed meetings at Pueblo and Silver Cliff and organized Hancock veteran clubs at Canyon City and other points. I look for a handsome Democratic majority in the State. We passed through Indiana on our return and found everything there favorable. I regard Indiana as surely Democratic in October.'"

A Telegram from the Next Vice President.

The following telegram from Hon. William H. English, the next Vice President of the United States, was received by Captain Hettler last evening while he was in attendance upon the meeting of council:

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 14.—All the Democrats are rejoicing here over the news from Maine. Chairman Barnum telegraphs me that Plaisied is elected by probably three thousand. We elect two Congressmen certain and probably four, and gain the Legislature. The Republicans are greatly discouraged.

The telegram was quietly circulated among the members of council and as they read the intelligence it contained their faces bore evidence of the enthusiasm they would like to have given forcible expression to.

Police Pickings.

James Harrigan was physically unable to control his locomotive powers last evening, and as a result a policeman controlled them for him in the interest of the calaboose. Jim slept the hours away on the velvet side of a plank last night, and although he pleaded piteously for mercy this morning, the inexorable arm of the law came down on him to the extent of $3.

Harmon L. Graves belongs to that class of humanity known as printers. When a printer gets full he gets full with a vengeance. This was the case with Harmon and he was compelled by a policeman to jingle type in the calaboose last night. The Mayor jingled Harmon $3 worth this morning.

A Visitor from Maine.

Last evening as Captain Smith was throwing a drunken and disorderly individual into the look-up, the poor wretch was heard to remark: "If I had been at home down in Maine you infernal Democrats wouldn't have had an opportunity to lock me up and the election would have resulted differently." He didn't say it in such mild and gentle language as is quoted, but emphasized his remarks with such frightful profanity as to cause another unfortunate individual who occupied an adjoining cage to plug up his ears.

Maine's Sweeping Victory.

From the Pittsburgh Post. Every first Monday of September preceeding the Presidential election, for the last twenty years it has been the unwelcome duty of the Post to chill the ardor and enthusiasm of Democrats with the news of big Republican majorities in Maine—ranging from 15,000 to 20,000. This year the conditions are reversed, and we greet our readers with the inspiring news of a magnificent Democratic victory in the Pine Tree State. We go booming into the close quarters of the Presidential contest encouraged and stimulated by unexpected success; by victory in a Republican stronghold, and over a disciplined and powerfully equipped army directed by the most brilliant partizan leader in American politics.

The great Republican majority of past Presidential years has melted away, and the State of Blaine and Hamlin and Fry and Hale takes its place in the column of States certain to give electoral votes to Hancock and English. Revolutions don't go backwards. The victory of September will be emphasized in November.

The crushing defeat the Republicans have experienced in Maine is the more significant because that party threw the Presidency into the scales, and impressed with the necessity of victory, lavished money, in a vain endeavor to purchase success, as money was never before expended in a state contest. Not only all the officeholders, employees and contractors of the government were black-mailed for the corruption fund, but Blaine carried with him to the State, from the jobbers and syndicates of New York, interested in perpetuating Republican rascality in the government, a hundred thousand dollars for election purposes. This was added to by contributions sent from the Republicans of leading North-west cities (even Pittsburgh sending its thousands) until the corruption fund was swelled to half a million dollars. The clergy was dragged into the contest to help Blaine through, and Bob Ingersoll joined hands with the political priests in preaching the gospel of the De Golyer and Credit Mobilier champion.

But it was no go. Blaine's splendid generalship and unlimited financial resources, were no match for the detestation that now animates the people towards the party of sectional hate and fanaticism, of gigantic jobbery and spoliation. Maine's vote Monday places the election of Winfield Scott Hancock, as President of the United States, outside the range of probabilities and makes it a certainty. The Republicans staked everything on carrying the State by 8,000 to 10,000 at the least. They have lost, and with it lost their remote chance of the Presidency. Democrats all over the Union will now march to assured victory. The Democracy of Ohio and Indiana will push the fighting under the inspiring news from the Northeast, and three weeks from yesterday will crown their labors with brilliant victories. Pennsylvania from this time forward becomes a great battlefield for Democratic success, and we believe will take its place in the Hancock column in November.

GARFIELD is beginning to look wild-eyed about his region of Ohio. The floppers are thick as locusts and the Germans are going in droves.

THERE were scarcely any Republicans to be seen on the streets yesterday. The reason was obvious. And did you hear the news from Maine?

ANOTHER rebel outrage! Every time General Hancock's name was mentioned at a Republican meeting in Brooklyn the other evening it was received with loud cheers. There must be something wrong with the machine.

On the 10th inst., the New York Express prophetically said: The Republicans boast that they will carry Maine by 15,000 majority, which will melt down to 5,000 by election day, and disappear altogether when the returns come in.

THE Republican papers all over the country claim that the defeat of their party in Maine was due to the Greenbackers, while Senator Jim Blaine, who was on the sod, says that it was brought about by the naughty Democrats. While the SENTINEL believes that honors are easy in the premises, it doesn't care a continental to whom the victory is accorded. It is content to know that Radicalism was routed from a stronghold that was supposed to be impregnable.

HAYES and his Cabinet are away from the seat of Government, every clerk that can pull a pound for the Republicans has been granted leave of absence, and is busy electioneering with the people's money, and yet we remember hearing of civil service reform. What a wall will go up when Hancock is elected, about retaining these valuable subordinates, who have so faithfully performed their duties during these many years. It will be a pity to disturb them, they are so loyal.

THE following is an extract from a letter received yesterday from a Michigan Democrat:

"Maine fires her gun to-day. President Weaver has been there to drive the Greenback sheep into the Republican pen. He is bought up—went South to get and twist facts against us for Republican use, and for nothing else."

Our Michigan friend's head is level. If he had only known when he was writing how the axe was then being laid at the very root of the tree he would doubtless have been happier than he was. But then he is happy now—shake. It wouldn't surprise us to see Michigan tumble, too. In fact we are prepared for almost anything in that way.

THE Democrats have had control of the lower House for five years, and of the Senate one year, and yet no "rebel debts" paid, though there are a number of Confederate Brigadiers in Congress. Now the Democrats propose to elect Hancock, as a gallant Union general, President, whereupon the Republican press and orators straightway claim that his election means the payment of these debts and pensions. That is to say, though the Confederate Brigadiers refuse to pass such bills, the arming of the hero of Gettysburg with the veto power against such legislation will ensure their enactment. This is logic which no "fellow" can understand.

SENATOR JIM BLAINE, of Maine, telegraphs a sympathetic letter to Garfield at his home in Mentor, Ohio. With reference to the crushing defeat the rotten Radical organization received at the hands of an aroused and outraged people Senator Jim says: "Such scenes were never before witnessed in Maine." And Senator Jim was right. He spoke truthfully. Such scenes were never before witnessed in that stronghold of Radicalism. The wiping out at one fell swoop of a Republican majority of 15,000, and the "wiping in" of an opposition majority of from 3,000 to 4,000 was a scene calculated to make such a bitter and unrelenting partisan as Jim Blaine pause and look upon with awe and wonderment. It was a scene not down on the bills, and carried the audience composed of the people of the United States by storm. Poor Jim! and also poor Garfield! we are generally of a sympathetic nature, but we have none of that commodity for either of you.

A CONTRAST.

On the 4th day of July, 1861, Winfield S. Hancock, then a captain in the army and stationed at Los Angeles, in California, where a strong disunion sentiment existed, delivered a public address from which the following are extracts:

"To those who, regardless of sacred memories, insist on sundering this Union of States, let us who only wish our birth-rights preserved to us, and whose desire it is to be still citizens of the great country that gave us birth, and to live under that flag which has gained for us all the glorious histories we boast of say this day: 'Your rights we will respect; your wrongs we will assist you to redress; but the Union is a precious heritage that we intend to preserve and defend to the last extremity.'"

"Let us believe, at least let us trust, that our brothers there do not wish to separate themselves permanently from the common memories which have so long bound us together; but that, when reason returns and resumes her sway, they will prefer the brighter page of history, which our mutual deeds have inscribed upon the tablets of time, to that of the uncertain future of a new confederation, which, alas! to them may prove illusory and unsatisfactory."

"Let them return to us! We will welcome them as brothers who have been estranged, and love them the more that they were angered, and returned to us."

These eloquent words were patriotic, humane, statesmanlike. They reveal a noble character, which time and great events have since matured into the strong man whom the Democratic party of the United States have made their candidate for President.

On the 28th day of January, 1864, there was a debate in Congress on the question of the seizure and absolute confiscation, without limitation of time, of the lands and property of the Southern people in rebellion. James A. Garfield, then a representative from Ohio, made a speech in favor of absolute unlimited confiscation—a speech breathing intense animosity and revenge.

After citing with approval the banishment of the Tories of the revolution and the confiscation of their property, and censuring South Carolina because she relented and passed an act of oblivion, and permitted Tories to vote and hold office, Garfield said:

"Gentlemen on the other side tell me that this is an abolition war. If you please to say so, I grant it. The rapid war current of events has made the army of the republic an abolition army."

"I hold it as a settled truth, that the leaders of this rebellion can never live in peace in this Republic."

"They must follow the fate of the Tories of the Revolution."

"We must follow the march of the army with a law that will sweep away the cause of the terrible revolution. The war began by proclamation, and it must end by proclamation. We can hold the insurgent States in military subjugation half a century if need be, or until they are purged of their dross and poison, and leave them to stand up clean before the country, to come back with clean hands if they come at all. I want to see in all those States the men who have fought and suffered for the truth tilling those fields on which they pitched their tents."

The speech was closed in these words:

"Let the Republic drive from its soil the traitors that have conspired against its life, as God and His angels drove Satan and his host from Heaven. He was not too merciful to be just, and to hurl down in chains and everlasting darkness the 'traitor angel' who rebelled against Him."

This James A. Garfield, a preacher of Christianity, who thus impiously invoked the avenging wrath of God upon his fellowmen and fellow-citizens, because they saw their political rights and duties differently from his view of them, and fought for them like brave men, is to-day the candidate of the Republican party for President, and his own public declarations, as well as those of the leaders of his party, prove that he and they have now the same feeling towards the Democrats of the Southern States, as he expressed on the 28th day of January, 1864, towards Southern "traitors." Is it wonderful that, as against such a man, there should be a solid South?

With such a speech before us, it is not hard to see in the Garfield of 1864, the same man who, on June 27, 1879, denounced the doctrine of State rights as taught by Jefferson and Madison, as "the evil genius, the incarnate devil of America," and the same Garfield who accepted the $5,000 De Golyer bribe money, and made a false oath to screen his character from the charge of a payment to him of $329 by Oakes Ames—the same Garfield who aided and abetted John Sherman in the great political crime of 1876, by which the vote of Louisiana was fraudulently counted against the Democratic candidates—the same Garfield who afterwards sat as a judge on the very case he as a partisan had aided to prepare, and had prejudged for his own client.

The vindictive and dishonest mind which in 1864 demanded the absolute confiscation of Southern land and the banishment of their owners, for the benefit of freed slaves and Northern carpet-baggers, is akin to that which could take a bribe and deny it, and aid in stealing the vote of a State and then sit as a partial and unjust judge to vindicate the theft. Mental ability, which Garfield does possess, and true nobleness of character, which he does not possess, are not convertible terms. The step is but short from the devilish spirit of fanaticism and revenge to the baser one of fraud and perjury.

In view of the contrast presented, which of the two men, Hancock or Garfield, should be regarded as most fit to be chief ruler of all the people of the United States? for whom as has been wisely said, "there can be no permanent prosperity without pacification," and we may add, no good government without honesty.

THE "REBEL BRIGADIERS."

The Republicans are constantly assailing the Democrats for proposing to deal justly with the Southern States, and to treat its people as equal citizens of our common country. Having restored the Southern States to their former position in the Union, there is no possible alternative but to allow them to choose their own State officers and Representatives and Senators in Congress, and it is not only natural, but best in every way, that they should choose their ablest and most respected and most influential citizens to office, so long as they are truly patriotic and loyal. To call their chosen Representatives and Senators "rebel brigadiers" is not only an insult to them and their people, but a flagrant violation of the principles which should govern our dealings with each other as members of a free republic. In fact, it is inimical to good feeling, and calculated to hinder the growth of these relations which are essential to progress and prosperity.

But the scurrilous taunt is not so much intended to wound and exasperate these men because they fought in the Confederate army or favored secession, as to punish them for being Democrats, and to damage the Democracy of the North for having such men as Hampton, and Hill, and Gordon, and Lamar, to mention no others, among their associates and allies. In Republican estimation it is no crime to have been a Confederate Brigadier provided one has since become a Republican; the only crime consists in being both a Southerner and a Democrat. The Republicans have always been ready and anxious to secure Southern supporters on any terms. Grant appointed the rebel General A. T. Akerman attorney-general, and after Akerman left the cabinet Grant appointed him a United States judge, and his appointment was confirmed by a Republican Senate. Hayes appointed Key, a rebel general, postmaster-general, and for no discernible fitness nor reason save that he had been a rebel general. The Republicans made Hughes, of Virginia, who was one of the most violent of rebels during the war, judge for life. They made the late James L. Orr "a rebel brigadier," minister to Russia, with a salary of $12,000 a year. Colonel Northrup, United States attorney in South Carolina, was an officer in the Confederate army. Major Morphis, United States marshal for Southern Mississippi, served under Gen. Lee. The rebel Gen. Chandler was first made mail agent and then appointed district attorney in Mississippi. G. W. Henderson, a rebel colonel, was appointed revenue collector by Grant. Mosby, the fierce and bloody rebel guerrilla, was appointed to office after he became a Republican, and is now United States consul at Hong Kong. Indeed, the Republicans have taken special pains to reward every prominent "rebel" who has joined their ranks with Federal appointments. It is only Democratic Southerners that they despise and insult. In Mississippi they have nominated for state auditor Captain Buchanan, who served in the Missouri cavalry and took part in the Fort Pillow massacre. They have made General Longstreet Minister to Turkey, and have honored Humphrey, of Alabama, who raised a rebel brigade, with a Federal judgeship. Other names might be mentioned, but these instances show how utterly unprincipled and despicable is the conduct of the Republicans in sneering at Southern Democrats as "rebel" brigadiers, while they love and cherish and reward with office every "rebel" who joins their ranks. In fact, the worse the rebel the better Republican he becomes, and the more the Republicans seem to think of him.

There was considerable excitement in the office of Justice Greenbaum this morning occasioned by an action of assault and battery, the charge being preferred by an old man named Moots against his wife.

The parties reside on Maumee Avenue and each have been twice married. The allegation as set forth by the prosecutor was to the effect that he was lying on a bed in the family domicile when his wife came in and began to love him in too violent and demonstrative a manner. She rolled him over, pulled his hair, and concluded her exhibition of affection by tearing off his nether garment. The old lady tore around the temple of justice in the vain endeavor to prove that her liege lord was equally in the fault, but the Justice thought she was guilty a dollar's worth, in addition to the costs, and so ordered.

There was considerable excitement in the office of Justice Greenbaum this morning occasioned by an action of assault and battery, the charge being preferred by an old man named Moots against his wife.

The parties reside on Maumee Avenue and each have been twice married. The allegation as set forth by the prosecutor was to the effect that he was lying on a bed in the family domicile when his wife came in and began to love him in too violent and demonstrative a manner. She rolled him over, pulled his hair, and concluded her exhibition of affection by tearing off his nether garment. The old lady tore around the temple of justice in the vain endeavor to prove that her liege lord was equally in the fault, but the Justice thought she was guilty of a dollar's worth, in addition to the costs, and so ordered.
